Aims and Scope

Al-Qamar is a peer-reviewed scholarly journal devoted to Islamic Studies and related disciplines. The journal publishes original, evidence-based research that engages critically with primary and secondary sources and contributes meaningfully to academic understanding of Islam, Islamic thought, Muslim societies, and related intellectual and cultural traditions.

The journal welcomes research in Qur'anic Studies, Hadith, Seerah, Islamic jurisprudence and law, Usul al-Fiqh, theology and philosophy, Sufism, Islamic ethics, Islamic education, Muslim history and civilization, comparative religion, interfaith studies, Orientalism, Islamic intellectual history, manuscript studies, and contemporary Muslim issues.

Al-Qamar also considers interdisciplinary research in related areas of the humanities and social sciences, including history, sociology, education, law, culture, language, public ethics, religious harmony, and contemporary Muslim societies, provided that the research maintains a clear and substantial connection with Islamic Studies, religious studies, Islamic civilization, or Muslim intellectual traditions.

The journal publishes manuscripts in English, Urdu, and Arabic. For Urdu and Arabic submissions, an English title, abstract, keywords, Roman-script author names, and English affiliations are required.

The journal values research that is original, methodologically clear, analytically rigorous, properly documented, ethically responsible, and relevant to national and international scholarly discourse. Submissions should present a clear research problem and reasoned academic argument rather than being merely descriptive, devotional, journalistic, or polemical.

Article Types

Al-Qamar currently accepts the following categories of submissions:

1. Research Articles
2. Book Reviews

The journal does not accept other submission categories unless formally announced by the Editorial Office.

Research Articles should present original scholarly research supported by appropriate evidence, methodology, analysis, and documentation.

Book Reviews should provide a critical and scholarly assessment of recently published academic works relevant to the journal's fields of interest. Book Reviews are not treated as original research articles.

Peer Review

Research Articles submitted to Al-Qamar undergo an initial editorial assessment followed by double-blind peer review. The identities of authors and reviewers are concealed from one another during the review process.

Manuscripts are evaluated with regard to scholarly quality, originality, methodological soundness, and relevance to the journal's scope, clarity of argument, documentation, and academic integrity.

Book Reviews are evaluated by the Editorial Office for scholarly relevance, accuracy, originality of assessment, and academic quality. Where appropriate, a Book Review may be referred to a subject specialist.

Editorial decisions are based on scholarly merit, relevance to the journal's scope, ethical compliance, peer-review reports, and editorial assessment. Editorial decisions are made independently of payment, personal relationships, institutional affiliation, or other non-academic considerations.

Open Access and License

Al-Qamar is an open-access journal. All published articles are freely available to readers without subscription or access charges.

Published articles are distributed under the Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License (CC BY 4.0), unless otherwise stated in relation to third-party material. The license permits the use, distribution, and reproduction of the published work, provided appropriate credit is given to the original author(s) and the source.

Publication Charges

Al-Qamar does not charge authors for submitting, processing, reviewing, editing, formatting, or publishing manuscripts.

No submission fee, article processing charge (APC), publication fee, peer-review fee, copyediting fee, formatting fee, DOI fee, or fast-track fee is charged at any stage of the publication process.

Readers, researchers, institutions, and libraries are likewise not charged for access to the journal's published content.

Publication Ethics

Al-Qamar is committed to responsible scholarly publishing and academic integrity. Authors are expected to submit original work, acknowledge all sources appropriately, and avoid plagiarism, duplicate publication, fabrication, falsification, and other forms of academic misconduct.

Authors should disclose relevant conflicts of interest and ensure that all submitted material complies with applicable ethical and scholarly standards.

Manuscripts may be screened for plagiarism or other forms of academic misconduct. Where serious ethical concerns arise, the Editorial Office may request clarification, undertake further investigation, reject a manuscript, or take appropriate post-publication action in accordance with the journal's applicable policies.

Copyright and Licensing

Copyright in published articles remains with the author(s), subject to the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License (CC BY 4.0).

Authors retain the right to reuse their published work in accordance with the terms of the license, provided that appropriate acknowledgement is given to its original publication in Al-Qamar.

Submission and OJS

Submissions to Al-Qamar are managed through Open Journal Systems (OJS).

Authors are required to submit manuscripts through the journal's online submission system and are responsible for ensuring that author names, affiliations, titles, abstracts, keywords, references, and other required information are complete and accurate at the time of submission.

Detailed instructions concerning manuscript preparation, formatting, submission requirements, and the publication process are provided in the Author Guidelines and related sections of the journal website.

Publisher Information

Al-Qamar Islamic Research Institute is an independent academic publisher and research development platform based in Lahore, Pakistan. Established in 2014, the Institute works for the advancement of scholarly research, academic publishing, research training, and the promotion of quality academic content in Islamic Studies, humanities, social sciences, religious studies, history, law, ethics, and related fields.

Since its establishment, the Institute has developed and supported academic journals, scholarly books, research magazines, textbooks, monographs, edited volumes, and other research-based publications. Its publishing work is planned and supervised in consultation with senior academicians, researchers, editors, reviewers, and subject specialists to ensure academic quality, editorial responsibility, and scholarly relevance.

The Institute has published three academic journals and a wide range of academic books, textbooks, monographs, and research-oriented publications. It is supported by a professional team of 39 staff members and an extended academic network of more than 80 contributors, including scholars, reviewers, editors, and researchers from Pakistan and abroad.

Al-Qamar was launched as the Institute's first academic journal with a commitment to peer review, editorial independence, ethical publishing, and quality research in Islamic Studies and related disciplines. The journal maintains a selective editorial process and a rigorous acceptance policy, with an acceptance rate of approximately 12 percent. It was later recognized by the Higher Education Commission of Pakistan.

Through its publishing and research activities, Al-Qamar Islamic Research Institute aims to contribute to the development of independent academic publishing in Pakistan and to provide a serious scholarly platform for researchers working in Islamic Studies, humanities, social sciences, and allied fields.
