Citation and References Style

Al-Qamar follows the Notes and Bibliography system of the Chicago Manual of Style, 16th edition. Authors must use footnotes for source citations and provide a complete References/Bibliography section at the end of the manuscript.

All sources cited in the manuscript must be accurately and consistently documented. References should contain sufficient bibliographic information to allow readers, reviewers, editors, and indexing services to identify and verify the sources.

The journal accepts scholarly sources in English, Arabic, Urdu, Persian, and other languages. For non-Roman sources, authors should provide complete bibliographic information and, where required for indexing and international discoverability, Roman-script transliteration of author names, titles, and other bibliographic details.

Authors are responsible for the accuracy of quotations, paraphrases, translations, Qur'anic references, Ḥadīth references, DOI links, URLs, and bibliographic information. Incomplete, inconsistent, or unverifiable references may be returned for correction before publication.

For detailed examples of books, journal articles, chapters, theses, classical Islamic sources, Qur'anic references, Ḥadīth collections, and electronic sources, authors should consult the journal's Citation and References Guidelines.

Transliteration Tables

Al-Qamar provides transliteration resources to promote consistency in Arabic, Urdu, and Persian names, titles, technical terms, references, and Roman-script metadata. The journal follows the ALA-LC Romanization Tables as the principal reference for transliteration.

Authors using Arabic, Urdu, or Persian sources should consult the relevant transliteration table when preparing manuscripts, references, titles, keywords, and bibliographic metadata.

Available Transliteration Tables

Arabic Transliteration Table
For Arabic terms, personal names, book titles, Qur'anic and Ḥadīth terminology, classical Islamic sources, and Arabic bibliographic references.

Urdu Transliteration Table
For Urdu personal names, titles, books, articles, place names, technical terms, and bibliographic records.

Persian Transliteration Table
For Persian personal names, titles, terms, manuscripts, and bibliographic records.

The complete Arabic, Urdu, and Persian ALA-LC transliteration tables are provided by Al-Qamar for authors' reference.

Authors should apply transliteration consistently throughout the manuscript, including the main text, footnotes, references, English metadata, titles, and keywords.

Multilingual and Metadata Policy

Al-Qamar publishes scholarly research in English, Urdu, and Arabic. To support international indexing, citation tracking, and scholarly discoverability, manuscripts submitted in Urdu or Arabic must include complete English metadata.

For Urdu and Arabic submissions, authors must provide:

- English title
- English abstract
- English keywords

- Roman-script author names
- Author affiliations in English
- Corresponding-author details in English
- Roman-script bibliographic information where required for indexing and discovery

Author names and affiliations should remain consistent across the manuscript, OJS metadata, published article, and DOI metadata where applicable. Authors are encouraged to provide ORCID iDs and institutional email addresses.

Arabic, Urdu, and Persian terms should be transliterated consistently where Roman-script presentation is required. Diacritics may be used, particularly in specialized studies of Qur'anic Studies, Ḥadīth, Islamic jurisprudence, Arabic Studies, manuscript studies, theology, and classical Islamic thought.

Qur'anic and Ḥadīth references must be accurate and verifiable. Classical Islamic and manuscript sources should include sufficient bibliographic or archival information for identification and verification.

The editorial office may review multilingual metadata, transliteration, references, and author information during editorial screening and may request corrections before peer review or publication.

Al-Qamar supports multilingual scholarship while maintaining consistent standards of citation, transliteration, metadata, and international discoverability.
